It's Time to Get up and Dance at the Canadian Music Fest with HolidayCity.com

Music lovers are flocking to downtown Toronto in search of great music, world-class performances and just non-stop fun at the Canadian Music Fest 2010.

HolidayCity.com - All music fans out there, especially those in North America and Canada, should start booking their Toronto hotels for 10th to 14th March 2010 to avoid any disappointment. For these four days would see over 700 new local and international artists descending on downtown Toronto for Canada's largest music festival, the Canadian Music Fest (CMF). This amazing congregation that features some of the best singers and musicians in the world is part of the Canadian Music Week (CMW).

The CMW, which is celebrating its 28th anniversary this year, brings together musicians and fans alike for one whole week through live performances, trade exposition, a film festival, conferences, award shows and of course, the Canadian Music Fest. For 5 consecutive nights, thousands of music fans would flock to over 45 live music venues in downtown Toronto to catch a variety of performances ranging from adult contemporary, alternative, blues, classic rock, funk and many more. CMF is not only where you can catch performances by current chart-hitting artists such as Alicia Keys, Jamie Cullum and Robin Thicke, it is also the best place to enjoy performances by new, emerging artists and bands such as Burning Love, Blind Mule, Handsome Furs and many more. The Canadian Music Fest is definitely the place to be for musicians that are hoping to get the big breaks with A&R reps and music publishers, booking agents and talent buyers in attendance, looking for the next big star to emerge.

Lee Lai Huat, CEO of HolidayCity.com, and a die-hard music fan, enthuses over the significance of the festival. "The Canadian Music Fest is, without a doubt, the place to be for anybody who enjoys music and appreciate its diversity" he said. "Where else can you spend 5 nights at 45 venues just listening to different kind of music in one city? There's something for everybody. You can be a jazz fan listening to a bluegrass band playing at the next venue. It's simply awesome. And with the large turnout expected, fans and visitors can go to HolidayCity.com for great discounts on room rates for Toronto accommodation."
